

Food and Nutrition Service
Disaster Food Assistance Programs Support You Can Count On!

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in all its programs and activities on the basis of race, color, national origin, age, disability, and where applicable, sex, marital status, familial status, parental status, religion, sexual orientation, genetic information, political beliefs, reprisal, or because all or part of an individual's income is derived from any public assistance program. (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs.) Persons with disabilities who require alternative means for communication of program information (Braille, large print, audiotape, etc.) should contact USDA's TARGET Center at (202) 720-2600 (voice and TDD).

To file a complaint of discrimination, write to USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, 1400 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, DC 20250-9410, or call (800) 795-3272 (voice) or (202) 720-6382 (TDD). USDA is an equal opportunity provider and employer.

Nothing is more important than providing food when people find themselves suddenly, and often critically, in need following a storm, earthquake, flood or other disaster emergency. USDA makes sure that people have enough to eat.

The United States Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) coordinates with State, local and voluntary organizations to:

- Provide food for shelters and other mass feeding sites.
- Distribute food packages directly to households in need in limited situations.
- Issue emergency Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program benefits.

As part of the National Response Framework, FNS supplies food to disaster relief organizations such as the Red Cross and the Salvation Army for mass feeding or household distribution. State agencies notify USDA of the types and quantities of food that relief organizations need for emergency feeding operations. FNS also authorizes States to operate a Disaster Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP).

For more information and resources please visit the FNS website at:

www.fns.usda.gov/disasters/disaster.htm

Food Distribution Programs Disaster Assistance:

www.fns.usda.gov/fdd/programs/fd-disasters

USDA Commodity Food Network:

www.commodityfoods.usda.gov

Disaster Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program Guidance:

www.fns.usda.gov/disasters/response/D-SNAP_Handbook/guide.htm

SNAP Outreach Toolkits:

www.fns.usda.gov/fsp/outreach/tool-kits.htm

In addition, the USDA Farm Service Agency provides assistance for natural disaster losses, resulting from drought, flood, fire, freeze, tornadoes, pest infestation, and other calamities.

www.fsa.usda.gov/FSA

The Disaster Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (D-SNAP)

Powerful Benefits

- D-SNAP ensures easy access to safe, nutritious foods for disaster victims.
- D-SNAP benefits are loaded on Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) card for use at most grocery stores for groceries and in some cases, hot or prepared foods.
- D-SNAP benefits are calculated to allow households to purchase a nutritious diet for 30 days - households of four currently receive $668.
- D-SNAP benefits are available quickly after a disaster – usually as soon after grocery stores open for business.
- D-SNAP benefits are available to victims who meet financial eligibility requirements and who have experienced a temporary loss of income, inaccessible resources or high disaster-related expenses – eligibility is not limited to households typically eligible for the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program.

Flexible Delivery

- FNS approves D-SNAP operation in areas with a Presidential disaster declaration for Individual Assistance.
- D-SNAP is operated by State Departments of Human Services in coordination with the Food and Nutrition Service (FNS).
- States can design application and benefit delivery systems to respond to conditions on the ground. Application sites may be operated out of Department of Human Services offices, FEMA Disaster Recovery Centers, mass shelters, stadiums, or other large-capacity venues.
- Benefits may be redeemed for hot, prepared foods and/or groceries.
- State Departments of Human Service can contract with non-profit organizations to outreach to the eligible public.

Using USDA Commodity Foods During Disasters

- USDA's Food and Nutrition Service supplies commodity foods to disaster relief organizations such as the Red Cross and the Salvation Army for mass feeding or household distribution.
- Disaster organizations request food through State agencies. States, in turn, notify USDA of the types and quantities of food that relief organizations need.
- USDA does not set aside stocks of food specifically for disasters.
- In an emergency, existing stocks of commodity food stored at State, local, and school warehouses intended for the National School Lunch Program, The Emergency Food Assistance Program, and other USDA food assistance programs are used.
- Commodity foods include a variety of canned and frozen product including fruits, vegetables, and meats.

Disaster Foods For Mass Feeding Sites

- States have authority to release USDA commodity foods to disaster relief agencies for mass feeding when the President issues a disaster declaration, and in certain other types of emergencies.
- USDA commodities intended for the National School Lunch Program are most often used for mass feeding. School food inventories get lower as the end of the school year approaches which may effect what types of commodities are available.

Disaster Foods for Direct Distribution to Households

- Disaster relief organizations sometimes make USDA commodity foods available in smaller sizes to individual households for preparation and consumption at home.
- USDA Commodity foods for household consumption are most often obtained from State and recipient agency stocks intended for The Emergency Food Assistance Program, the Commodity Supplemental Food Program, and the Food Distribution Program on Indian Reservations.
- States must always get approval from the USDA Food and Nutrition Service to distribute commodity foods from these programs to disaster victims.
- It is important to note that a household cannot receive both D-SNAP benefits and USDA disaster commodities at the same time. States must take reasonable steps to prevent households from participating in both programs.

